Self Reflection

This groupu project was a fun way to limit test what I know about web design and web development. I was able to be apart of a really smart and fun team that made my job much easier that I thought coming into this project. We went through a couple of websites before eventually agreeing on Empresso, who we thought we could improve with our ideas. When it came to getting started, I was able to build off and give ideas to the others and make a solid figma prototype that we could follow. I was pretty happy with what we had come up with, espcially since I have not felt too comfortable with creating figmas. It became nice practice for me and I learned alot from the others. The html and css portions of the website felt alot easier than previous projects mainly because of the practice that we have put in. I felt alot more comfortable creating what I wanted on the page and not having to feel stuck like I have been on a few assignments. I think overall this was some of my better work in terms of responsiveness and pacing, I have had a couple issues with those and I didn't feel any problems there this week. Overall, I feel really good about this project and I feel like many of the skills I am learning are finally starting to stick. I still got a long ways to go but I am happy with my progress in this project and overall in the academy.
